

SIXTIETH CONGRESS READY

SESSION WILL LARGELY
RUN TO FERVID
ORATORY

SPEAKER CANNON WILL SUCCEED HIMSELF

House Will See a Complete
Reorganization in the Senate

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—The first session of the Sixtieth congress will convene at noon Monday. The session has been looked forward to as one likely to be more than ordinarily interesting. When congress meets just before a presidential campaign, as in the present case, the policy of the leaders of the majority has always been to confine the session more to oratory than to action. But the session about to begin will prove an exception to the rule. The demand for currency legislation can not be ignored. Since the present financial flurry began columns of newspaper space have been devoted to expressions of opinion from bankers, business men, manufacturers, merchants and others, showing how pressing these people believe the subject to be.

Other matters of great political and commercial importance also demand attention. Many recommendations will be contained in the President's message. Though few of them, of course, will be enacted into law at the present session the majority of the subjects will at least come up for discussion. The control of railroads and other corporations during an interstate business will receive attention, including proposed amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law.

Other recommendations will probably include a graduated inheritance tax, consideration of a Federal income tax, the revision of the tariff on imports from the Philippines, the passage of a modified shipping bill, the creation of postal savings banks, the establishment of a more effective public health service than now exists, and the extension of the parcel post.

The demand for the exclusion of the Japanese will be another serious problem with which the administration and Republican leaders in congress will have to deal. The Pacific coast states are insistent that Japanese shall be excluded from American oil, and the delegation in congress from those states will urge legislation.

Monday will be devoted to the work of organization, and the President's message will not be presented until the following day. Vice President Fairbanks will call the Senate to order Monday, while the House will be called to order by the clerk.

In the House greater interest attaches to the proceedings because a complete organization will be necessary. This includes the election of a speaker and other officers and the drawing of seals by the members of the House.

The Democrats will hold their caucus in the House of Representatives this evening. The incident of the revolt against the rule of John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, as minority leader in the House has died out, and it is expected that he will be selected with little or no opposition.

Among the Republicans it is settled that Representative Cannon shall succeed himself as speaker, and he will be nominated in the Republican caucus for the third time, without a voice in opposition. The old officers of the House will be re-elected, as the combine which organized the House several years ago still sufficiently cohesive to prevent any of the new members from undoing the program the veterans have mapped out. There is a contest over the postmaster, as a vacancy caused by death exists, and Ohioans are fighting it out among themselves for this office, the postmaster of the House being the office apportioned to Ohio under the old combine.

Mr. Frye, of Maine, will again be chosen president pro tempore of the Senate, but as Vice President Fairbanks has a habit of being always in his seat and punctual in attendance, Mr. Frye will have little to do. The other officers of the Senate hold over.

Including Senators Gore and Owen, of Oklahoma, in regard to whom there may be some contest, and Smith, of Michigan; Curtis, of Kansas; and De-Post, of Delaware, who took their seats, filling vacancies, late in the last session, there will be eighteen new men in the Senate. Those will be Bankhead and Johnson, of Alabama; Borah, of Idaho; Bourne, of Oregon; Brice, of New Jersey; Brown, of Nebraska; Davis, of Arkansas; Dixon, of Montana; Guggenheim, of Colorado; Phelan, of Kentucky; Richardson, of Delaware; Stephenson, of Wisconsin; and Taylor, of Tennessee.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS AT ALVA.

Special to Daily Leader.

Alva, Ok., Nov. 30.—The club women of Alva have arranged to inaugurate a series of good sales this winter, from which they expect to secure sufficient funds to buy suitable drinking fountains, which they will place on the public square around the city next spring.

This has been done in several towns in Oklahoma, and the women's clubs are receiving much praise for the humanity service rendered.

Drinking fountains both for man and beast have thus been furnished where city councils have failed to do so.

STATE NOTES.

Kenton (Beaver county) News, November 14: A storm struck this section of the moral vineyard Saturday night and kept working his way along till six inches of snow fell and mercury dropped to 6 above zero. It was an exceptional snow on account of there being no wind with it. Stock did not suffer severely.

The Orient Railroad company is still building in Oklahoma, despite the condition of public finances. The railroad reached Elmer, Okla., several days ago. The construction force at work was marched down the main street to a number of long tables and compelled to eat such things as roast pig, fried chicken, pie, cake, salads, etc.

"An Indian at Cantonment, a widower, had a white man carry the news to one of his Cheyenne widows on the Washita that he desired to marry her," says the Arapaho Bee. "His story told how many horses and mules he had and that one mule would be given to marry the relatives for their consent. To show the improvement our Cheyenne brother is making to our system of frontier finance, he had the news carried that his credit was good at the store. The relatives, as true diplomats, put up a furious roar, which no doubt brought through another mule—and everybody is happy."

YOUNG FISH A FIREMAN.

Reappears, This Time Armed With a Shovel.

Muskogee, Okla., Nov. 30.—After working for four months at Muskogee as a way bill clerk in the Frisco freight office, Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., the son of the former president of the III. note Central, is going to take a job as fireman on the Rock Island. The young man, whose father's income is said to be $1,000 a day, wants to learn all the details of the railroad business, and as his actions show, he is prepared to endure all the trials of hard work.

Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., surprised the good people of this city in June, when he took off his coat at the Frisco freight depot and settled down to the duties of watch bill clerk in the most democratic fashion. The work was hard and the weather was very warm, but he met the difficulties and demands in the best spirit.

Stuyvesant Fish, who is now waging a strong fight against E. H. Harriman for control of the Illinois Central, is a director of the National Park Bank of New York City. The family is prominent in the east, and Mrs. Fish is one of the leaders of New York's Four Hundred. Young Mr. Fish has given up the comforts and influence of excellent surroundings in New York City to make out freight bills and fire locomotives in the south-west.

"From the bottom up" is the young man's motto. He says that he is determined to learn everything about the railroad business out on the line. After he has obtained the knowledge that is gained only from experience, he will be equipped to accept a position at the general offices of some large system and advance himself to a responsible executive position.

Mr. Fish is very popular here. The railroad men and the people admire his determination. The same as every other employee, he worked from early in the morning until late in the evening, every day for four months.

At the beginning of October, Mr. Fish took a two weeks' vacation. He did not wish to lay off, but he was called to New York by his father. It was said that he was to be appointed vice president of a small line, but it turned out that he will work as a fireman on the Rock Island.

THE ARMY AND NAVY FOREVER

COUNTRY'S FUTURE HEROES CLASH IN MIMIC WARFARE

COUNTLESS THOUSANDS
WILL VIEW STRUGGLE

Between West Point and Annapolis Academies
Football Squads

(By Associated Press.)
Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 30.—The Quaker City is the gathering place today of members of the social sets from almost every city in the East and of many of Washington's official circle, all of whom are here for the great annual gridiron contest on Franklin Field this afternoon between the football teams of West Point and Annapolis academies. Philadelphia is in gala attire for the event. The black, gold and gray of the army, the blue and gold of the navy are flying everywhere, and if other evidences were lacking that something of importance is about to take place it needs only a glance into the corridors of any of the prominent hotels to see scenes of animation.

At noon it was apparent that as large a crowd as ever attended an army and navy game on the University of Pennsylvania's gridiron would be on hand to see the struggle. Many special trains came in during the forenoon from Washington, New York, West Point, Annapolis and intermediate points, bringing representatives of the navy and war departments, rear admirals, major generals and officers of all other grades down to the plain privates, jacksies and marines.

Among the unbiased prophets the army team rules the favorite, the judgment being based on the showing of the two teams during the season. The West Point boys have played stronger eleven and therefore have had a little more experience. Against the strongest teams they have made an excellent showing. The Annapolis team, however, is considered above the average of past years and is counted upon to give the embryo generals a hard tussle for the honors.

The game this afternoon will be the thirteenth of a series played by the two academies. Of the twelve games played the navy has won five and the army seven. Last year the navy was victorious by the score of 10 to 0.

THE BLUE AND GRAY

An Episode of the Inaugural Parade.

Far up the long marching line there came a ringing roar of cheers, and then as the grand parade swept swiftly by past they thrilled sweetly through the clear November air the thrilling music of the fifes and drums. The tune awakened memories of long ago wars. "The Girl I Left Behind Me." In front of the musicians, whose hair was silver white, there marched two comrades now, who in the dreary days of battle had been bitter foes upon the field of strife and blood. One wore the gray, the other was garbed in the blue and between them they bore the stately banner of their country. Behind, with heads erect and chins drawn in and eyes to the front, with steady tread, in spite of age and passing years, there marched side by side, the veterans in blue and gray. The grandeur and glitter of the great parade were forgotten and watching thousands cheered these comrades of today. Tears of joy streamed down many a furrowed cheek and countless thankful hearts went up to heaven a prayer of gratefulness that the enemies of a bitter past were dead beyond recall, and that forever in Oklahoma there would be no north, no south, no east or west, but a grand and united man and womanhood, marching under one flag and loving one country.—Cline Worrall in Globe and Chief.

GETS CHARGES AGAINST SELF.

Oklahoma Protests Against President's Choice.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Jake Bodowits, the Ardmore, Okla., merchant, who filed charges against Grover A. Porter, before the latter was reappointed District Federal Marshal in the new state, yesterday filed a protest at the Department of Justice because his charges against Porter, together with the affidavits in the case, had been sent to Porter.

Mr. Bodowits hopes to prevent the confirmation of Porter in the Senate. He is here now seeing members of the Senate committee on Judiciary. Bodowits declares that his life has been threatened because of his activity in making the charges, which involve alleged "grafting." The department of Justice does not regard the charges as well founded. Porter is a cousin of Mrs. Roosevelt.
